Established in 1937, the Idaho Potato Commission (IPC) is a state agency that is responsible for promoting and protecting the famous Grown in Idaho® seal, a federally registered trademark that assures consumers they are purchasing genuine, top-quality Idaho® potatoes. Idaho's ideal growing conditions, including rich volcanic soil, climate, and irrigation, differentiate Idaho® potatoes from potatoes grown in other states.

This directory is published by the IPC and contains a listing of licensed fresh shippers, brokers, and processors at the time of publication. IPC does not recommend individual shippers or processors, but the ones listed here use genuine Idaho® potatoes, and their packs and products reflect the superior quality of the raw materials they use. Customers who have unique requirements will find Idaho suppliers well equipped and eager to fill their needs. 2024 Edition.

Always look for these Grown in Idaho® seals for the best potatoes.

OUR MOST POPULAR RUSSETS

Idaho® potatoes are unmatched in their exceptional quality, wholesome taste, and wide varieties. From the go-to Russet Burbank to the popular Russet Norkotah, we're proud to offer you the finest potatoes from the Best Earth on Earth™.

Russet Burbank

Background: The Russet Burbank variety was developed in 1914 by Lou Sweet, a previous president of the Potato Association of America. Scientist Luther Burbank is credited with the discovery of the original seeds. While Idaho growers have successfully produced many varieties over the years, the Russet Burbank is their greatest commercial success and has established a strong brand equity for the state. It's a late-maturing variety that requires a 140- to 150-day growing season.

Appearance: The exterior skin is relatively thin and light brown in color. The exterior shape is oval and slightly flattened, with few shallow eyes. The interior is off-white to ivory and moderately dense.

Flavor Profile: A distinctive, earthy potato flavor. The high solid (starch) yields a grainy texture and slightly chewy skin. Bakes up dry and fluffy; fries crisp and golden brown.

Usage: Fresh, frozen, or dehydrated, this variety is ideal for all preparation styles.

Shippers for This Variety: Visit idahopotato.com/directory/varieties/2

Russet Norkotah

Background: The Russet Norkotah variety was released in 1987 by North Dakota State University, this variety now ranks second in popularity for fresh-market use. Attractive type (refers to consistent oval shape); a high percentage of No. 1 potatoes is common with this early-maturing variety. Available August through June.

Appearance: Excellent conformation; attractive medium-brown color with a long to oblong shape.

Flavor Profile: A mild potato flavor with a soft texture and moderate density. Tends to bake up creamy and moist, not grainy. Moderately chewy skin. White to pale-yellow interior. Medium specific gravity for most; newer generations grown in Idaho have higher starch content.

Usage: Grown primarily for the fresh market. Because of the uniform appearance, this variety has had good success in the retail grocery segment and foodservice. Well suited to all preparation types.

Shippers for This Variety: Visit idahopotato.com/directory/varieties/3

Alturas Russet

Background: A late-maturing, high-yielding russet potato cultivar with a high tuber specific gravity that was released in 2002 by the USDA Agricultural Research Service and the Agricultural Experiment Stations of Idaho, Oregon, and Washington. A high percentage of No. 1 potatoes is common with this variety.

Appearance: Excellent conformation and an attractive medium-brown color with an oblong shape. They tend to be short.

Flavor Profile: Culinary quality is high, with larger tubers suitable for fresh market if heavily russeted skin is not essential.

Usage: Grown primarily for the processed market. Its resistance to the accumulation of sugars during long-term storage also makes it suitable for processing out of storage into french fries. Makes excellent mashed potatoes.

Shipper for This Variety: Kingston Fresh

Bannock Russet

Background: The Bannock Russet was released in 1999 by the USDA Agricultural Research Service and the Agricultural Experiment Stations of Idaho, Oregon, and Washington. It is a late-maturing, oblong russet variety with excellent fresh-pack and processing qualities.

Appearance: It has an attractive russeted skin and short tuber length. Excellent culinary qualities also make it suitable for the fresh market. The Bannock Russet, in comparison with the Russet Burbank, has consistently produced greater U.S. No. 1 yields.

Flavor Profile: Similar to the Russet Burbank.

Usage: When stored at 45°F, the Bannock Russet produces a lighter fry color and has a lower glucose concentration than a Russet Burbank. Medium to high solids.

Blazer Russet

Background: Named a variety in 2005, this is one of the newest graduates of the potato-breeding program of U.S. university research scientists in the Intermountain West and Pacific. It is ready to harvest earlier than other leading potatoes, meaning the Blazer Russet can replenish dwindling supplies of potatoes remaining in cold storage from the previous harvest.

Appearance: The oblong, medium to large tubers average about 7 to 8 oz. each. They have characteristic light russeting on their brown to tan skin, with firm, cream-white, or white flesh inside.

Flavor Profile: Similar to the Russet Burbank, it yields dry and fluffy baked potatoes and golden fries with a crisp outer flesh and a dry, mashed flavor center.

Usage: Well suited for fresh-market sale or for potato processors to make into frozen potato products.

Classic Russet

Background: Released by the Tri-State Breeding Program in 2009, this early to medium variety is a possible replacement for the popular Norkotah. It has excellent fresh-merit ratings and exceeds other leading potatoes in its overall score.

Appearance: The Classic Russet has an excellent tuber shape and appearance and a high proportion of No. 1s, high solids, and a good fry color.

Flavor Profile: The Classic Russet has a higher protein content than many of the standard russet varieties (22-32 percent greater). It also has a high culinary rating, with qualities similar to the Russet Burbank. It is light and fluffy in baking and produces light fries after harvest and shortly thereafter.

Usage: Sold in fresh-pack markets and processed right out of the field or during the early storage season.

Shippers for This Variety: Moody Creek Produce, Inc. and Wada Farms Potatoes

Clearwater Russet

Background: Released by the Tri-State Breeding Program in 2009, this is a medium to late variety for both fresh and processing markets. It has high protein content, measuring 38 percent greater than the Russet Burbank. This variety has an exceptionally high yield average and specific gravity, along with high solids.

Appearance: It produces oblong tubers with brown, medium-heavy russet skin. The eyes are shallow in depth and intermediate in number and are evenly distributed. Tuber set is low, and average tuber size is medium. The flesh is white to creamy white and firm.

Flavor Profile: Qualities similar to the Russet Burbank. A light and fluffy baker with excellent fry characteristics and taste, often outperforming the Ranger Russet and Russet Burbank in tests.

Usage: Its excellent fry color out of storage and its attractiveness make this variety suitable for both processing and fresh-market usage. It has a high specific gravity and is resistant to sugar ends as well as most internal and external tuber defects.

Mountain Gem Russet

Background: The Mountain Gem Russet, known as A03158-2TE prior to release, is a medium- to late-maturing variety having both high early- and full-season yields.

Appearance: The Mountain Gem's oblong-long, medium russeted tubers have higher protein content than standard potato varieties.

Usage: The Mountain Gem's high U.S. No. 1 yields, coupled with excellent culinary and nutritional qualities, make it an excellent candidate for fresh-market production. It also maintains acceptable reducing sugar concentrations and fry quality from storage and does well with early processing. Excellent culinary usage.

Ranger Russet

Background: The Ranger Russet is a medium- to late-maturing russet potato jointly released by the USDA and the University of Idaho in 1991. It has high solids and is used mostly for frozen processing and occasionally for fresh pack.

Appearance: Long and slightly flattened shape with a medium-russet-color skin and white flesh. Eyes are numerous and medium to deep. Produces a consistently long shape and high percentage of U.S. No. 1 potatoes.

Flavor Profile: Culinary traits: Bakes up dry and fluffy with outstanding potato flavor. Fries crisp and light golden in color.

Usage: Grown primarily for the processed market. Because of the high specific gravity (averaging 1.095 in Idaho) and low sugars, this variety processes well for lightly colored fries with good texture.

Teton Russet

Background: The Teton Russet is the product of a 14-year research cooperative between the USDA, University of Idaho, Oregon State University, and Washington State University potato breeding programs. With its acceptance, the Teton Russet became the ninth variety of potato to be used by McDonald's in North America.

Appearance: The Teton Russet is a cross between the Blazer Russet and Classic Russet. The tubers are oblong with moderate russet, good skin, and shallow eyes.

Usage: Noted for both fresh market and processing. Produces excellent fries.

Umatilla Russet

Background: The Umatilla Russet was jointly released by Oregon, Washington, Idaho, and the USDA Agricultural Research Service in 1998. This cultivar has attributes that make it an excellent choice for frozen processing.

Appearance: Attributes include a high specific gravity, good fry color, uniform tuber shape, and good resistance to internal physiological disorders. The Umatilla produces significantly more U.S. No. 1 tubers of 12 oz. or larger than the Russet Burbank typically does.

Flavor Profile: Taste test panels have rated the flavor and texture of the Umatilla to be at least as good as or better than the Russet Burbank.

Usage: Grown for fresh and frozen french fry processing, with fry colors lighter than the Russet Burbank. In general, the Umatilla Russet has less glucose and sucrose accumulation in storage compared to the Russet Burbank.

OTHER VARIETIES

Traditionally, Idaho has been known for its russet potatoes; after all, that's what made us famous! We grow billions of pounds of potatoes yearly, most of which are russets. But many acres are now devoted to other potatoes, like reds and yellows. In fact, Idaho is the #1 grower of yellow potatoes in the U.S. We continue to be your one-stop shop for ordering a wide array of excellent varieties.

All Blue

Appearance: Smooth, oblong, medium size, with deep blue to almost purple skin.

Flavor Profile: Moist, firm flesh with a slightly grainy texture.

Usage: Fresh market. Especially suited to potato salads.

Bintje

Appearance: Small- to medium-size round tubers with golden skin and yellow flesh. Smooth and well rounded. Skin has a silk-like finish.

Flavor Profile: Exceptional flavor. Some describe it as having a unique, light, nut-like flavor.

Usage: Best served roasted or as french fries. Often seen as the standard for European-style or Belgian fries.

Shipper for This Variety: Wada Farms Potatoes

Cal Red

Appearance: The tubers have a bright-red skin color, round and smooth shape, shallow eyes, and a medium specific gravity for reds. White flesh.

Flavor Profile: Waxy; makes a good potato salad; skin color stays red.

Usage: Fresh market.

Shipper for This Variety: Eagle Eye Produce

French Fingerling

Appearance: Large fingerling tubers with smooth, dark, rose-red skin and waxy, yellow flesh.

Flavor Profile: Has a delicate, nutty flavor.

Usage: Especially suited to potato salads, roasting, or sautéing.

Shippers for This Variety: Eagle Eye Produce; Potandon Produce, LLC; Wada Farms Potatoes; and Wilcox, Floyd & Sons, Inc.

Huckleberry Gold

Appearance: Round to oval tubers with purple skin and yellow flesh, noted for their excellent culinary qualities and high level of antioxidants.

Flavor Profile: Good potato flavor.

Usage: Primarily used for mashed potatoes and in salad preparations. Roasting and boiling are also popular cooking procedures.

Shipper for This Variety: Genesis Organics, LLC

Ida Rose

Appearance: Round to oval tubers with bright-red skin that retains color during storage and moist, firm, white flesh. The skin can russet slightly in light soils.

Flavor Profile: Considered to be an excellent potato for baking, microwaving, and boiling. Ranks high in taste tests.

Usage: General purpose. Popular as a salad potato.

Shipper for This Variety: Eagle Eye Produce

Milva

Appearance: Bright-yellow flesh with pale-yellow skin.

Flavor Profile: Waxy type. Suitable for boiling because it stays firm and does not readily discolor.

Usage: General purpose. Popular as a salad potato.

Norland

Appearance: Tubers are oblong, smooth, slightly flattened, and medium red, with shallow eyes. Seldom off-type in shape. Color decreases after maturity. The deep, dark-red skin color is appealing when prepared with the skin on. White flesh. Baby reds typically command a premium price.

Flavor Profile: Moist texture, as the specific gravity is low to intermediate. Excellent potato flavor.

Usage: Fresh—excellent for boiling, roasting, and salad preparations.

Shippers for This Variety: Eagle Eye Produce; Potandon Produce, LLC; Wada Farms Potatoes; and Wilcox, Floyd & Sons, Inc.

Purple Passion

Appearance: Purple skin and dark-purple flesh. High in antioxidants and ideal for the fresh fingerling market, with few tuber defects.

Flavor Profile: Excellent fingerling flavor.

Usage: Fresh market.

Purple Peruvian

Appearance: Fingerling tubers with purple skin and dry, earthy, bright-purple flesh.

Flavor Profile: Mild potato flavor.

Usage: Especially suited to potato salads, roasting, or sautéing.

Shippers for This Variety: Eagle Eye Produce; Wada Farms Potatoes; Wilcox, Floyd & Sons, Inc.; and 20/20 Produce Sales, Inc.

Red La Soda

Appearance: Light-red or pink color, oval shape with smooth skin. Eyes have medium depth.

Flavor Profile: Considered good for baking and boiling. Ranks high in taste tests. Its moderate specific gravity makes this a somewhat unusual red variety and provides a drier, fluffier texture than is common with reds.

Usage: Fresh market.

Shippers for This Variety: Eagle Eye Produce; Potandon Produce, LLC; and 20/20 Produce Sales, Inc.

Red Thumb Fingerling

Appearance: Red skin, red flesh, and smooth skin make this 1-by-2-inch tuber highly appealing.

Flavor Profile: It is sweeter than Russian Banana potatoes but not as starchy as some potato varieties.

Usage: This variety is best when roasted and is also suitable for potato salads.

Shippers for This Variety: Southwind by Wilcox and Wada Farms Potatoes

Ruby Crescent

Appearance: Rosy-skinned tubers with moderately dry, yellow flesh.

Flavor Profile: Mild, slightly nutty flavor.

Usage: Especially suited to potato salads or roasting.

Shippers for This Variety: Eagle Eye Produce; Wada Farms Potatoes; and Wilcox, Floyd & Sons, Inc.

Russian Banana

Appearance: Small fingerling tubers with buff-yellow skin and light-yellow, waxy-textured flesh.

Flavor Profile: Has a rich, buttery flavor.

Usage: Especially suited to potato salads, roasting, or sautéing.

Shippers for This Variety: Eagle Eye Produce; Southwind by Wilcox; Wada Farms Potatoes; Wilcox, Floyd & Sons, Inc; GPOD of Idaho; and 20/20 Produce Sales, Inc.

Yellow Finn

Appearance: Dark-yellow, flesh, with a flattened pear or oval shape and light, tan-yellow skin.

Flavor Profile: Waxiness gives it a moist texture accompanied by a rich, buttery taste that is slightly sweeter than Yukon Gold.

Usage: Primarily fresh. Boiled, fried, baked, and mashed. Often used in potato salads.

Yukon Gem

Appearance: This round-oblong, yellow-fleshed tuber has an optimal size profile. It has pink, shallow eyes.

Flavor Profile: Good waxy to drier texture with a golden buttery taste.

Usage: Excellent processed, with a notable taste profile for products such as chips. An excellent replacement or alternative to Yukon Gold for the fresh market. Also has been suitable for organic production.

Yukon Gold

Usage: Relatively light-yellow skin color, with a yellow interior and moist flesh. Shallow eyes that are well distributed. A medium specific gravity.

Flavor Profile: Originally marketed as having a buttery flavor, which comes from a combination of the yellow flesh and moist texture. Good potato flavor.

Usage: In foodservice, chefs have gravitated to the Yukon Gold image as a positive one for menu branding. Primarily used in mashed potatoes and in salad preparations. Roasting or boiling are also popular cooking procedures.

Shippers for This Variety: Eagle Eye Produce; Kingston Fresh; Wada Farms Potatoes; Wilcox, Floyd & Sons, Inc.; and 20/20 Produce Sales, Inc.

Mart Produce, LLC

martproduce.com

Mart Produce was established in 1980 by a group of local farms. For more than 30 years, we've supplied a large portion of the potatoes run through the shed. In 2014, two other partners who had been key suppliers for many years, Jentzsch-Kearl Farms and Grant 4-D Farms, were added as partners to the business. We operate 12 months out of the year in order to provide a regular supply of potatoes for our customers. Our goal is to provide a consistent supply of good-quality potatoes at a fair market price.

Kingston Fresh

kingstonfresh.com

Living Our Values. Kingston Fresh has been growing, packing, and shipping potatoes and onions for over 40 years. Engaging with our farmers throughout the planning process about what, where, and how much to plant each season is essential, starting with seed selection and profile specification. Managing harvest methods, food safety, and packing operations are all part of the process in handling our products all the way through the supply chain: "From Planting to Plate."

Hints & Tips

Authenticity

The Grown in Idaho® seal on each carton or bag is a certification mark designating that the potatoes inside came from Idaho.

Some shippers may have products from multiple states appearing with the same private label. Look for the required Grown in Idaho® seal when choosing Idaho® potatoes.

Storage

The Idaho Potato Commission recommends that cartons be stored with the lids on at a temperature range of 45°F–48°F.

Tracking Info

In addition to the required potato-variety labeling, each foodservice carton also shows a shed number to determine which shipper packed the product. You can find this listing in the Shed ID Numbers table on this page.

Each carton also has a “pack date,” referencing the date when the potatoes were graded, washed, sorted, and placed in the carton.

The number is a three-digit code that represents the consecutive day of the year—the Julian date—starting with January 1 as 1 and ending with December 31 as 365 (366 in a leap year).

To determine the Julian dates, please see the chart on the previous page or access a Julian date converter to calculate the day/month pack date by typing this URL into your web browser: idahopotato.com/directory/julian.

Idaho® Potatoes are actually not a variety!

To term Idaho® potatoes refers to the source of origin—the state of Idaho. While it primarily produces russets, Idaho also grows several other varieties of potatoes to fulfill foodservice and consumer requests.

Look for the designations on cartons or retail bags.

Basic American Foods

baf.com

Jack Hume founded Basic American Foods in 1933 with the belief that integrity and taste were paramount, and these same beliefs drive us today. While we started as a modest dehydration plant in California, we've grown our company and our capabilities over the last 90 years, becoming the market leader, because we want to help people serve great food to as many people as possible. That's why you'll find our foods and brands in restaurants, schools, hospitals, and grocery and club stores around the world.
